A sun flooded plateau, a single family house, a furniture laboratory

Design

The village people greet the new house just like an alien. Transparency, glass, steel and concrete meet sceptical eyes, unexpected and disturbing placed in the outskirts of the village, strikingly different to the small Tyrolean farmer houses. Time passes by and the people get used to the alien, learning to like him, as much more light shines in the rooms, the views towards the mountain panorama, the warming character of the sun rays, low energy costs made possible through a black absorbing wall.

The house and its naked materials finally get one with their environment, part of nature and the nature a permanent guest of the house. The whispered approval is transformed, today there is more than one house in this village.
