Solution

The farm building was brought up to date with the latest technology. In this way, the building can live on in its centuries-old tradition.

Subsequent fixtures that were not part of the original inventory were essentially demolished and the rooms returned to their original state.

The old floor structure was demolished and replaced by a new one, with a surface that meets the hygienic requirements.

A new steel staircase at the entrance and a glass-steel construction as an enclosure for the existing spiral staircase, leading to the basement, were added.
